What is the most energy efficient exterior door?

Combat rising energy costs with the patented Trio-E, the industry's most energy efficient exterior opening. The Trio-E door is steel stiffened for strength but has achieved an operable U-Factor of 0.34 which is better than most other steel stiffened doors currently available on the market today.

Do energy-efficient doors have adjustable thresholds?

Many energy-efficient doors have adjustable thresholds that can be set to the appropriate height to minimize gaps. Correct installation is crucial for maintaining the energy efficiency of a door. Properly installed doors ensure that there are no gaps or air leaks around the frame.

Are glass doors energy efficient?

If your door has glass panels, it's important to have multiple layers of glass with insulating spaces in between. This setup reduces the transfer of heat through the glass, making the door more energy-efficient. Glass doors can have a special coating called Low-E (low emissivity) that reflects heat and prevents it from escaping.

Should I replace my front door with a more energy-efficient one?

If you're ready to replace your front door with a more energy-efficient one, keep the following in mind as you shop: The weather where you live should be one of your major considerations. For example, colder climates warrant doors that help keep heat inside the home.

How do you know if a door is energy efficient?

Check the warranty provided by the manufacturer. A longer warranty often indicates the manufacturer's confidence in their product's durability. An energy-efficient door can transform the look of your home and help you save on your energy bills every month.
