Is a wind nest a defense against a tornado?

The wind nest that produces the tornado could be seen as some kind of defense, but the other two are otherwise constantly protected by weather. Not to mention the tornado actually moves away from the base and doesn't stay in place. There is one near a generator, but that's it.

Is there a weather zone near a generator?

There is one near a generator, but that's it. Also unlike the other two zones, this one has to be captured before the relevant operation, whereas the other two are captured at the end of their respective operations. Unlike Zona Uno and Zona Dos, the weather created here actually does significant damage to the base.

How does Rico get into the wind tunnel?

There are two entrances to the wind tunnel. The one that is closer to the fan leads to a research area with a computer where you can turn the fan off, letting Rico into the tunnel itself and allowing him to use the breaker. It has also been reported that Rico is not affected by the wind, if he grapples his way around on the ceiling.

The PWC V4.2 "Wind Gun" is a weapon in Just Cause 4. It's a big white gun that looks a little like a large shotgun in its layout, but doesn't have a round barrel. The whole thing is a long angular box with cables and other electrical parts showing. The weapon seems to be a newer and possibly more advanced version of the Air Propulsion Gun from Just Cause 2. It fires an air ...

Look for one part that's gusting with wind - there is a console nearby that disables the wind so you can go down it. Breaker is midway through there. Near one is the one I'm assuming has the unkillable gun nearby?

Operation Windwalker is a mission in Just Cause 4. Quote from the map icon: "The wind cannons are set and the Stormchaser is ready. All that's left is to summon a Tornado and commence the operation to capture the Atmospheric Vortex Engine." Rico arrives at Mina Vendaval and stares at the clouds and mountains for a while. Meanwhile Mira is at Zona Tres. She's overseeing the ...
