Bifacial solar panels remain exempt from the tariffs for now, after a Nov. 16 ruling by the U.S. Court of International Trade (CIT). Abigail Ross Hopper, president and CEO of SEIA, issued the following statement on the USITC's recommendations to President Biden:

The U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC) today determined that there is a reasonable indication that the U.S. solar panel manufacturing industry is materially injured by imports of silicon solar cells and panels from Cambodia, Malaysia, Thailand and Vietnam. The Commission will now pass the decision-making baton to the Dept. of Commerce, which will ...

The role played by EU institutions is undeniably important in determining how the international trade interests of member states are defended. In the specific context offered by the China-EU solar panel trade dispute, Italy played the role of the EU member state that values the protection of labour rights - especially in sectors considered ...

Plus, the public recriminations associated with the solar panel case fit into an established pattern of "managing" European unfair trade investigations. Not quite business as usual While features of the solar panel case follow established patterns, three broader policy-relevant matters are raised by this case that governments and analysts might dwell upon:
